Prices are contractually subject to commercial confidentiality terms.	Disclosure of contract rate allowances may affect the ability to obtain competitive market prices in future public tendering processes.	Essential Energy is bound to not release publicly the contractor rates. These rates are direct input into the pricing models however with no comparative rates available there is no benefit to end consumers in making the rates public – this only benefits contract competitors.
3	Essential Energy – Revised Proposal – 12.1 TSS Attachment 2 Indicative NUOS Pricing Schedule -Confidential	Site specific prices for individual customers	Network prices	Personal information	Prices are shown for individual customers	Essential Energy's ability to successfully negotiate prices in future could be affected. Site specific customers prices may provide competitive advantage to other large customers in the same industry. Essential Energy may also have to manage possible adverse public reaction stemming from a lack of understanding of factors relevant to setting individual prices.	There is no public benefit in sharing identifiable customer data for the purposes of public lighting costs and revenues. The breach of the customer's privacy far outweighs any perceived public benefit.
